What to do

1. Read the poem "Who ate the cake?"
2. Discuss the poem.
3. Pair up with a friend and role play the poem.
4. Your teacher will explain the rating scale.

Who ate the cake?

I had a little tea party
this afternoon at three.

'Twas very small -
three guests in all.
Just I, myself and me.

Myself ate all the sandwiches,
While I drank up the tea.
'Twas also I who ate the pie,
And passed the cake to me.

The fallen angel cake

by Maggie Pearson

I'm not saying my mum's a bad cook, but the angel cake she baked for the cake stall at the village fete was a disaster. It looked like the cat sat on it.

"If I turn it upside down," she said, "and ice it – the dent in the middle won't show. If you nip down to the fete as soon as it opens and buy it back, no one will know."

So that is what we did.

Surprise! I could not buy it back. Mum's cake wasn't on the cake stall. We spent the whole afternoon trying to find out what happened to it.

After we helped with the clearing up Bandile's mum invited us all back to her place. I knew how it would be: tea in bone china cups, funny little forks to eat the cake with and no fun.

It was worse than that. Much worse!

Right in the middle of the table sat my mum's cake! We were getting up the courage to confess when someone said, "Oh! What a beautiful cake!"

Bandile's mum beamed. "Thank you," she said. "I baked it myself."
