CONTENT

- Use visual cues to make meaning
- Use new vocabulary
- Discuss ideas and participate in language games.
- Follow the listening process.

5.1 Look at the pictures and interpret them to predict what will happen in the story. Answer questions about the story.

1 One fine morning Anansi the spider sat high up in a thorn tree watching the elephant hard at work raking his watermelon patch. Anansi became hungrier and hungrier.

I love watermelons, but they are such hard work to grow. I must have one.

2 At midday the elephant went to rest. Here was the moment Anansi had been waiting for. He broke off a thorn and used it to make a hole in the biggest, ripest melon.

Now's my chance. My stomach is rumbling.

3 Anansi squeezed through the hole into the watermelon and started eating. He ate and ate until he was as round as a ball.

Eish, this is tight!

4 After eating the whole watermelon, Anansi was too fat to get out.

My tummy is so full! I will never be able to get out of this watermelon.

Anansi is the clever spider that we read about regularly in West African folk stories. He is clever and always manages to trick others. He is a little lazy and he is always hungry! There are many stories about this little character.

5.2 Discuss the cartoon story and the new vocabulary.

The fallen angel cake

by Maggie Pear

I'm not saying my mum's a bad cook, but the angel cake she baked for the cake stall at the village fete was a disaster. It looked like the cat sat on it.

“If I turn it upside down,” she said, “and ice it – the dent in the middle won’t show. If you nip down to the fete as soon as it opens and buy it back, no one will know.”

So that is what we did.

Surprise! I could not buy it back. Mum’s cake wasn’t on the cake stall. We spent the whole afternoon trying to find out what happened to it.

After we helped with the clearing up Bandile’s mum invited us all back to her place. I knew how it would be: tea in bone china cups, funny little forks to eat the cake with and no fun.

It was worse than that. Much worse!

Right in the middle of the table sat my mum’s cake! We were getting up the courage to confess when someone said, “Oh! What a beautiful cake!”

Bandile’s mum beamed. “Thank you,” she said. “I baked it myself.”

Wind is whistling, invisible air. It blows because air never stops moving – warm air always rises, and cold air rushes in to take its place. It's like a game of chase that never stops, but gets faster or slower.

17.2.1) Circle the prepositions in the following sentence.

Warm air rises, and cold air rushes in to take its place.

17.2.2) Write the plural for “game” _____

17.2.3) The wind is (blows) _____ fast.

17.2.4) The air (am / is / are) moving.

17.2.5) Write down the opposite for “slower” _____

17.3 Why does it rain?

(7)

Clouds carry tiny water droplets which bump into each other, growing bigger and heavier, until it becomes too heavy to float. The water drops fall down and we call it rain.

17.3.1) Change the verb into the present continuous tense.

The clouds are (carry) _____ water.

It is (become) _____ too heavy to float.

The water drops are (fall) _____ down.

17.3.2) Find words in the text above and complete the table.

Common nouns	Verbs
1)	1)
2)	2)

17.4 Why does lightning strike?

(4)

A lightning bolt is a giant spark of electricity. It strikes because it is attracted to the ground, in the same way that a magnet attracts certain metals.

Never seek shelter under a tree during a thunder storm. When lightning strikes a tree, the electricity shoots down the trunk. It may electrocute you if you are too close.

17.4.1) Change the underlined word to a plural.

One storm, many _____.

17.4.2) Fill in the missing preposition.

It strikes because it is attracted _____ the ground.

Never seek shelter _____ a tree.

The electricity shoots _____ the trunk.
