

KWA THEMA SKIILS

What is office administration?

It covers a basic knowledge of administrative and client services, communication skills and competency in computer typing, crucial to the successful functioning of any office or business environment. Without it, the office will have no structure and balance. The person responsible has an important role in answering the phone, taking messages, typing email or agendas, taking minutes and keeping all the paperwork and files up to date.

Keyboard Care:

- Computer Keyboards can get dirty very easily. Cleaning the surface of a keyboard is very straight forward.
- Make sure your computer is turned off before you work on your keyboard.
- You can use compressed air to blow debris out of your keyboard, or turn it upside-down and shake it gently. Do not disassemble it.
- Cleaning materials such as pads or swabs that contain a cleaning liquid can be used on the keys and upper surface.
- To prevent a buildup of dust and dirt inside a keyboard, use a can of compressed air to blow it out. Although keyboards are inexpensive, you don't want to be wasting valuable time with a problematic keyboard.

CD Care:

- The less handling that is done of the compact disk, the better. CD has the entire media area exposed, and thus vulnerable. This is one reason why CD systems that use caddies prolong the life of CDs--they in essence form a "jacket" for the CD that protects it. Handling CDs causes dirt and scratches that can eventually interfere with reading. CDs should be handled by the edge or the inner hub whenever possible.
- You should in general not put stickers, labels or tape on CDs, or write on them with regular pens
- CDs should always be cleaned radially, which means starting at the inside of the disk and moving outward, not by rubbing in circles.

Printer Care:

While printer care can vary greatly depending on the type of printer you are using, it is important to understand some general guidelines when dealing with any printer.

- Be careful with printer jams. Don't ram the paper out if you have a paper jam. This can damage the printer. Look at guides on the manufacturer site, if you don't have time to do that, remember that you want to get the paper out smoothly. Many printers have a hatch attached at the back that can be removed. You will then have access to the paper wheels, and you should be able to see the paper that is jammed in there. Remove the paper this way, and it is unlikely that you will damage the printer.

- Power down correctly. Turn your printer off when not in use. This can prevent drying of ink and also help keep the printer functioning at high quality. Remember to use the printers power button, and then remove at the plug if need be. Don't power off if you are in the middle of something. These will just cause problems for you.

Mouse Care:

This input device may quite possible be the most used next to the keyboard, and therefore needs attention as well to keep it operating properly.

- To clean a mouse with a rubber ball on the bottom, use a can of compressed air and some alcohol wipes. Once a month, remove the mouse ball from the mouse and clean it with the alcohol wipes. Then use the compressed air to remove any dirt and debris that may have found its way into the mouse.
- If you have a different type of mouse, see the instructions that came with it.

Monitor Care:

There are a variety of monitors in use today, but all require attention to keep them functioning properly. It is important to understand what type of monitor you have (flat-panel versus non-flat panel) before performing any type of maintenance.

- Non-flat panel monitors: Most office products stores carry sprays or wipes for this equipment. Never spray directly onto the monitor itself; spray onto a cloth and then wipe the cloth over the screen or monitor cabinet. Be sure your product is meant for your type of monitor.
- Flat panel monitors: These monitors usually have plastic screens and other components, and can be damaged by cleaning products that use chemicals (benzene, thinner, ammonia, acetone), abrasives, or compressed air.

 - Keep calls in business hours
- Use voice mail wisely
 - Leave detailed messages
 - Respond promptly to messages

Part 11

Prevent Strains and Sprains

Neck/Shoulders

Neck Rotation: Slowly rotate your head as far as comfortable to the right, then left.

Shoulder Rotation: Circle your shoulders, then reverse directions.

Head Side to Side: Bend your neck so left ear approaches left shoulder, then repeat for right. Add a little resistance by pressing your hand against the side of your head.

Chin Tuck: Slide your chin inward, without bending your neck up or down. This is easiest to practice initially against a wall. Tuck chin in, attempting to touch back of neck to the wall while also maintaining head contact. Don't jam your chin down to your chest.

Shoulder Blade Retraction: Pull your shoulders down and back.

Shrug: Slowly raise your shoulders toward ears and hold for a few seconds. Gradually bring shoulders down and relax.

Back

Shoulder Squeeze: Raise your arms in front of body, with elbows bent and thumbs up. Pull elbows back, squeezing shoulder blades together. Hold for a few seconds then release.

Stretch Up: Sit up straight and imagine a cable attached to the top of your head. Gradually stretch to be as tall as possible, hold for a few seconds, then relax.

Arms

Arm Relaxation: Drop your arms and hands to your sides. Gently shake them for a few seconds.

Arm Rotation: Raise your arms in front of your body. Rotate arms so palms face up, then rotate so backs of hands face each other.

Hands/Wrists

Wrist Flex: With your elbows on desk, gently use left hand to bend right hand back toward forearm. Hold for a few seconds, then relax. Repeat on other side.

Finger Fan: Spread your fingers as far apart as possible, hold, then clench fists, then release.

Feet

Toe Curl: Flex toes up, then curl toes under. Release.

Foot Rotation: Circle foot slowly from the ankle, then reverse.

Eyes

Eye Rolls: Roll your eyes clockwise then counterclockwise briefly.

Palm Eyes: Without touching your eyes, cup hands lightly over eyes for 30 seconds to rest them from light.

Look Away: Exercise your eyes by periodically looking away from your computer to focus on distant objects.
