TERM 3

Activity 1: LISTENING & SPEAKING

1.1 Look at the picture and answer the questions.

1.1.1) What is 'The tan lines of the new generation'?

"The tan lines of the new generation" is on the chest and it is the shape of two hands holding a cell phone.

1.1.2) Explain the reason for these tan lines.

Everybody (the new generation) is texting all the time, even when tanning.

1.1.3) What message does this picture convey?

This picture conveys the message that we are using our cell phones too much

1.1.4) Are the young men in the water the only ones with this problem?

No, everyone on the beach is texting and has the same tan marks.

1.1.5) Do you think it is a problem? Explain your answer.

Learner's own view can be expressed

Example: Yes it is a problem because we are ignoring the people next to us...

No it is not a problem because we are entertaining ourselves...

1.2 Participate in shared reading.

Are you addicted to your cell phone?

Seeing teenagers standing together, but totally ignoring each other is a common sight these days. According to a survey conducted, 78% teens aged between 12 and 17 have mobile phones. And they are not just using it to call their parents. One in four teens has access to the internet, far more than adults. So are cell phones really a good thing for teens?

Activity 6: LISTENING & SPEAKING

Testing your telephone etiquette

Before we deal with the dos and don'ts of telephone etiquette, let's test your current knowledge by rating each of the following scenarios as TRUE or FALSE. Only write T or F on the line.

Scenario one

It's 11:45 and Sandra is at her desk putting the final touches on her sales report, which is due at noon. She is on the final page when the phone rings. She tries to ignore it for a few moments, but the ringing continues. Eventually she picks up the phone and says with a smile: "This is Sandra, how may I help you?"

Sandra is demonstrating good telephone etiquette: False

- a) Pick up the phone within three rings. After the third ring customers become irritated.
- b) Smile while greeting the caller.
- c) Give your company / department name and your name.
- d) Ask the customer if you can help.

Scenario two

Sipho is a sales assistant at a large hardware store. His supervisor, Debra, is having a meeting with him about some new stock that has just arrived. Sipho's telephone rings. He immediately picks it up, greets the customer on the other end and politely says: "Let me put you on hold for just a minute."

Sipho is demonstrating good telephone etiquette: False

Sipho did not ask the customer if he could put him on hold – he told him. This can be very frustrating for a customer. Furthermore, Sipho did not ask permission to take the call in the first place. The person standing in front of you is as important as the person on the telephone. Acknowledge this with a gesture or "May I answer quickly?" before reaching for the phone.

Scenario three

Gerhard is a travel agent. His area of speciality is domestic travel. His phone rings and on the line, is a customer who needs help booking an overseas trip. Gerhard explains to the customer that he does not deal with foreign travel by saying: "I am sorry, you've reached the domestic travel department, and you need to talk to international. Hold on for a moment, I will transfer you."

Gerhard is demonstrating good telephone etiquette: False

When transferring a call:

- Explain to the customer why he is transferred, it gives the customer information and a choice.
- Give the name and number of the person you are transferring the customer to. If the customer is disconnected he can call the person directly.

6.3 Work in a group and demonstrate how the call in scenario two should have been answered.

Sipho is a sales assistant at a large hardware store. His supervisor, Debra, is having a meeting with him about some new stock that has just arrived. Sipho's telephone rings. He immediately picks it up, greets the customer on the other end and politely says: "Let me put you on hold for just a minute."

Sipho's telephone rings:

To Debra: "May I take this call?"

walk away and lower your voice volume.

To customer: "Thank you for calling. This is Sipho. How may I help you?"

To customer: I am in a meeting right now, may I call you back in a few minutes?

Activity 7: READING & VIEWING

7.1 Based on your experience of when you have phoned different companies, why is it important to have an answering standard when you answer the phone?

- Having an answering standard creates a professional and favourable first impression of your company. It gives the client a reason and a confidence to do business with you.
- First Impressions are lasting! The way a company answers the phone tells us a lot about the kind of service we can expect to receive from them.

Additional information to talk about...

Because first impressions are lasting, and often such first impressions are done over the phone, the customer will make an estimation of your business by how his or her conversation went with your representative. If you are able to wow them then you have allowed them to stop shopping around. You've given them a reason and a confidence to do business with you.

Being prepared when you take customers calls shows them that you are serious and you want their business. Keeping the customers waiting for too long, speaking incoherently and illegibly, playing music in the background or speaking curtly/rudely to them can seriously damage your reputation and drive away business.

Telephone etiquette is especially important in competitive industries because if you don't do it right, the customer has other options to choose from. Telephone etiquette is a basic part of customer service. Usually, clients call back for repeat business because they are familiar with the way you function. If you aren't courteous, prompt, and knowledgeable you are not giving your client any incentive to come back.

7.2 Set up your own answering standard for your company. What will be included in the standard?

- a) Pick up the phone within three rings.
- b) Smile while greeting the caller.
- c) Give your company / department name and your name.
- d) Ask the customer if you can help.

7.3 Use your own company name and write the direct words that will be used when a telephone is answered in your company.

“Thank you for calling Olympia Park School. This is Nellie speaking.
How may I help you?”

Activity 8: LANGUAGE STRUCTURE & CONVENTIONS

10.2 Take part in discussion on ending a call.

Activity 11: READING & VIEWING

CONTENT

- Read information text.
- Underline the important information.

Read the following information text individually and underline the important information.

HOW TO END A CALL PROFESSIONALLY

Don't underestimate the importance of ending the call on a positive note, particularly, if the caller has been "difficult".

Examples of how to end a call positively:

- Both you and the customer must agree on what is going to be done. Therefore repeat the action steps you are going to take.
- Ask the customer if you can do anything else for him.
- Thank the customer for the call.

HOW TO END THE CALL POLITELY IF THE CALLER IS A CHATTY PERSON.

- "Well, congratulations on the new house! I'm going to wrap up so I can take this next call, but please let me know if there's anything else you need. You have my number."
- "It's been nice speaking with you, but I need to wrap up. Can we set a time for our next call?"
- "Always a pleasure to hear from you. Is there anything else you need before I let you go?"
