Week 3-4

Powerpoint presentation Computer Application

PowerPoint presentations work like slide shows. To convey a message or a story, you break it down into slides. Think of each slide as a blank canvas for the pictures and words that help you tell your story.

Choose a theme

When you open PowerPoint, you'll see some built-in themes and templates. A theme is a slide design that contains matching colors, fonts, and special effects like shadows, reflections, and more.

*(Die volgende sal ons in Engels behandel mdat alle terme in engels gebruik word in die werkplek)***

1. On the File tab of the Ribbon, select New, and then choose a theme.

PowerPoint shows you a preview of the theme, with four color variations to choose from on the right side.

2. Click Create, or pick a color variation and then click Create.

Read more: Use or create themes in PowerPoint

Insert a new slide

- On the Home tab, click the bottom half of New Slide, and pick a slide layout.

Read more: Add, rearrange, and delete slides.

Save your presentation

1. On the File tab, choose Save.
2. Pick or browse to a folder.
3. In the File name box, type a name for your presentation, and then choose Save.

Note: If you frequently save files to a certain folder, you can 'pin' the path so that it is always available (as shown below).

Tip: Save your work as you go. Press Ctrl+S often.

Add text

Select a text placeholder, and begin typing.

- To insert a picture that is saved on your local drive or an internal server, choose Pictures, browse for the picture, and then choose Insert.

Add shapes

You can add shapes to illustrate your slide.

1. On the Insert tab, select Shapes, and then select a shape from the menu that appears.
2. In the slide area, click and drag to draw the shape.
3. Select the Format or Shape Format tab on the ribbon. Open the Shape Styles gallery to quickly add a color and style (including shading) to the selected shape.

Slides are best when you don't cram in too much information. You can put helpful facts and notes in the speaker notes, and refer to them as you present.

1. To open the notes pane, at the bottom of the window, click Notes .
2. Click inside the Notes pane below the slide, and begin typing your notes.

- To start the presentation at the first slide, in the Start Slide Show group, click From Beginning.

- If you're not at the first slide and want to start from where you are, click From Current Slide.

  - Broadcast your PowerPoint presentation online to a remote audience
  - Start an online presentation in PowerPoint using Skype for Business

Tip: For information about viewing your notes as you give your presentation without the audience seeing them, see View your speaker notes as you deliver your slide show.

Tips for creating an effective presentation

Consider the following tips to keep your audience interested.

Minimize the number of slides

To maintain a clear message and to keep your audience attentive and interested, keep the number of slides in your presentation to a minimum.

Choose an audience-friendly font size

The audience must be able to read your slides from a distance. Generally speaking, a font size smaller than 30 might be too difficult for the audience to see.

Keep your slide text simple

You want your audience to listen to you present your information, instead of reading the screen. Use bullets or short sentences, and try to keep each item to one line.

Some projectors crop slides at the edges, so that long sentences might be cropped.

Use visuals to help express your message

Pictures, charts, graphs, and SmartArt graphics provide visual cues for your audience to remember. Add meaningful art to complement the text and messaging on your slides.

As with text, however, avoid including too many visual aids on your slide.

Make labels for charts and graphs understandable

Use only enough text to make label elements in a chart or graph comprehensible.

Apply subtle, consistent slide backgrounds

Choose an appealing, consistent template or theme that is not too eye-catching. You don't want the background or design to detract from your message.

However, you also want to provide a contrast between the background color and text color. The built-in themes in PowerPoint set the contrast between a light background with dark colored text or dark background with light colored text.

For more information about how to use themes, see Apply a theme to add color and style to your presentation.

Check the spelling and grammar

To earn and maintain the respect of your audience, always check the spelling and grammar in your presentation.

Week 5-6
Interpret body language

Body language refers to the nonverbal signals that we use to communicate. These nonverbal signals make up a huge part of daily communication. From our facial expressions to our body movements, the things we don't say can still convey volumes of information.

Body language may account for between 50 percent to 70 percent of all communication. Understanding body language is important, but it is also essential to pay attention to other cues such as context. In many cases, you should look at signals as a group rather than focusing on a single action.

Facial Expressions

A smile can indicate approval or happiness. A frown can signal disapproval or unhappiness. In some cases, our facial expressions may reveal our true feelings about a particular situation. While you say that you are feeling fine, the look on your face may tell people otherwise.

A few examples of emotions that can be expressed via facial expressions include:

- Happiness
- Sadness
- Anger
- Surprise
- Disgust
- Fear
- Confusion
- Excitement
- Desire
- Contempt

The expression on a person's face can even help determine if we trust or believe what the individual is saying. The most trustworthy facial expression involves a slight raise of the eyebrows and a slight smile. This expression conveys both friendliness and confidence.

Facial expressions are also among the most universal forms of body language. The expressions used to convey fear, anger, sadness, and happiness are similar throughout the world.

The Eyes

When evaluating body language, pay attention to the following eye signals:

- Eye gaze: When a person looks directly into your eyes while having a conversation, it indicates that they are interested and paying attention. However, prolonged eye contact can feel threatening. On the other hand, breaking eye contact and frequently looking away might indicate that the person is distracted, uncomfortable, or trying to conceal his or her real feelings.
- Blinking: Blinking is natural, but you should also pay attention to whether a person is blinking too much or too little. People often blink more rapidly when they are feeling distressed or uncomfortable. Infrequent blinking may indicate that a person is intentionally trying to control his or her eye movements. For example, a poker player might blink less frequently because he is purposely trying to appear unexcited about the hand he was dealt.
- Pupil size: Pupil size can be a very subtle nonverbal communication signal. While light levels in the environment control pupil dilation, sometimes emotions can also cause small changes in pupil size. For example, you may have heard the phrase "bedroom eyes" used to describe the look someone gives when they are attracted to another person. Highly dilated eyes, for example, can indicate that a person is interested or even aroused.

The Mouth

When evaluating body language, pay attention to the following mouth and lip signals:

- Pursed lips: Tightening the lips might be an indicator of distaste, disapproval, or distrust.
- Lip biting: People sometimes bite their lips when they are worried, anxious, or stressed.
- Covering the mouth: When people want to hide an emotional reaction, they might cover their mouths in order to avoid displaying smiles or smirks.

Gestures

The following examples are just a few common gestures and their possible meanings:

- A clenched fist can indicate anger in some situations or solidarity in others.
- A thumbs up and thumbs down are often used as gestures of approval and disapproval.

The Arms and Legs

When you are evaluating body language, pay attention to some of the following signals that the arms and legs may convey:

- Crossed arms: might indicate that a person feels defensive, self-protective, or closed-off.
- Standing with hands placed on the hips: can be an indication that a person is ready and in control, or it can also possibly be a sign of aggressiveness.
- Clasping the hands behind the back might indicate that a person is feeling bored, anxious, or even angry.
- Rapidly tapping fingers or fidgeting: can be a sign that a person is bored, impatient, or frustrated.
- Crossed legs: can indicate that a person is feeling closed off or in need of privacy.

Posture

When you are trying to read body language, try to notice some of the signals that a person's posture can send.

- Open posture involves keeping the trunk of the body open and exposed. This type of posture indicates friendliness, openness, and willingness.
- Closed posture involves hiding the trunk of the body often by hunching forward and keeping the arms and legs crossed. This type of posture can be an indicator of hostility, unfriendliness, and anxiety.

Different methods of handshakes

10 Types of Handshakes and What They Mean

1. Sweaty palms: This is usually the sign of a nervous person.
2. Dead fish: This handshake is synonym to low self-esteem.
3. Brush off: This handshake is a statement of "it's my turf and my agenda that matters, yours doesn't."
4. The two handed handshake: This type of handshake is said to convey the meaning of warmth, friendly, honest and trustworthy. If his/her left hand is staying on your hand, it is a sincere handshake. If the hand goes up your wrist, your arms or your elbow, he is trying to get something from you.
5. Controller: This means they want to dominate any inanimate or animate object in the room.
6. Finger Vice: These people are often insecure. If they also crush your fingers they are adding a show of personal power, which is also designed to keep you at a distance.
7. Bone Crusher: This form of squeezing your hand until you cringe is clearly designed to intimidate you.
8. Lobster Claw: The person doing this fears connecting at a deep level and may have challenges building relationships. Take your time. Allow them to open up at their own pace.
9. The Top-Handed Shake: Instead of holding his hand in a vertical position, this hand shaker holds it horizontally, so that his hand is on top of yours. This means he feels superior to you.
10. The Pusher: She needs space and is not letting you in. You must give her the physical and emotional space she is asking for, if you want to be her friend.

Respect for personal space

Boundary violations typically fall into three categories: aggressive, passive-aggressive or accidental.

Here are several suggestions for respecting other people's boundaries.

- Focus on *respect Remember that everyone has thoughts, feelings, plans, dreams and hopes. Everyone wants to be heard and accepted as they are.
- Listen fully. Listen to another person with the goal of truly understanding them. Completely wait until the other person is finished speaking, take a breath, pause and then respond. You'll be making space for the other person to express him or herself and get out of the habit of reactivity.
- Listen for verbal cues. Some verbal cues may be obvious, such as another person saying "I'm uncomfortable sitting so close to you," or "I've asked you before to knock before you come in my house." Others may be subtle, such as "changing the subject in the midst of a conversation to something less emotionally vulnerable."
- Pay attention to body language. "Body language often speaks louder than words." If someone has their arms folded while they're talking to you, they might not be open to what you're saying. If someone is stepping back every few minutes, you might be standing too close and invading their personal space.

Each person is different, so they will have different boundaries. You can respect these different boundaries by listening fully and paying attention to verbal and nonverbal cues.

Sexual and Non-Sexual Harassment

Sexual harassment in the workplace is a form of discrimination that includes any uninvited comments, conduct, or behaviour regarding sex, gender, or sexual orientation.

All employees – of any position, from management to entry-level or hourly staffers – should be aware of what qualifies as workplace harassment and avoid these behaviours or report them if they occur.

| Sexual Harassment in the Workplace:                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |

Any actions or words with a sexual connotation that interfere with an employee's ability to work or create an uncomfortable atmosphere are considered sexual harassment.

Non-Sexual Harassment in the Workplace

Instances of workplace harassment include discrimination such as:

- Making negative comments about an employee's personal religious beliefs, or trying to convert them to a certain religious ideology
- Using racist slang, phrases, or nicknames
- Making remarks about an individual's skin colour or other ethnic traits
- Displaying racist drawings, or posters that might be offensive to a particular group
- Making offensive gestures
- Making offensive reference to an individual's mental or physical disability
- Sharing inappropriate images, videos, emails, letters, or notes
- Offensively talking about negative racial, ethnic, or religious stereotypes
- Making derogatory age-related comments
- Wearing clothing that could be offensive to a particular ethnic group

Non-sexual harassment includes any comment, action, or type of behaviour that is threatening, insulting, intimidating, or discriminatory and upsets the workplace environment.
